- We encourage all of our businesses to create a profile on Intentionalist.com and flag your location as Columbia City.
 - We will link directly to the Columbia City Intentionalist page on the CCBA website and in CCBA social media postings.

We encourage Columbia City businesses to think about your own supply chain and see if you can source materials from our locally-owned businesses.

Reducing the Need for Police Response

One way to combat over-policing is for our community to call upon the police less, and that is what we propose. We will empower our community with alternative ways to respond to nuisance and safety issues, so that we call upon the police less frequently, make our neighborhood safer, and help individuals get assistance that will have lasting impact.

There are many situations that can be addressed locally or by non-police professionals, like mental health specialists. We plan to create a set of community practices that empower us all to respond in the most appropriate fashion that reduces risk for everyone. While we know some of what this work entails (e.g., creating a resource list with guidance on who to call for various situations), we still have much to learn about how to do this well. As a small volunteer group, with no expertise in this area, we need support from all of you to learn, engage partners, create materials and do trainings. Please reach out to volunteer!

CCBA recognizes that we need to do more, and that these initiatives are only a starting point. So please provide advice and feedback on what more we should be doing, or saying, so that we can be a better partner in this work. Contact us at info@columbiacityseattle.com

Columbia City Welcomes Phase 1.5!

Encouraging our Customers to Return: “Columbia City Safe” Campaign

Under direction of our Business Services and Marketing committees, CCBA is launching an initiative to communicate assurance that our businesses are going to be safe, ready, and following official Covid-19 re-opening guidelines. The purpose is to give customers the confidence to shop, dine and get services in Columbia City. Here's what the project entails:

- Re-issue for Phase 1.5 the customizable red-and-white “open” poster that many of our businesses have been using to attract attention and describe what they are offering. The new posters for restaurants will include a “dine-in” option.
- Provide each business with a “Columbia City Safe!” seal designed for placement on or near the new “open” posters. Use of the seal signifies that the business is following the applicable state re-opening guidelines.
- Undertake a social media campaign communicating to customers that it is safe to return to Columbia City and encouraging them to do so.

We will be sending out a separate Columbia City Safe! e-mail, so you can update your business information for our current and upcoming phases and order your new Open Signs (For Restaurants, Bars and Coffee Shops below left, Retail and Services below right) and your CC Safe! Seal (above).
